Early Years News

It's official- it's Christmas!

A big 'Thank you' to Molly Cockburn's Mummy for coming in this morning to tell us all about being in the Police Force. The children certainly know the Emergency Number 999 now, should they ever need help. (but hopefully not!)

Along with our Christmas focus, we are continuing with our Investigation Station but this time looking at different 'Materials', so that we can extend our descriptive and scientific vocabulary. If you have any interesting 'Materials', cloth or otherwise, please do send them in for us to investigate.

We continue to hear readers daily and please bear with us if your child is given the same book for another read. The books are selected to coincide with our Phonics teaching and some reinforcement may be required. If you would like to help them extend their learning, they can always have a go at writing out the story/drawing and writing an additional page for the book/having a go at writing about the pictures/simply describing the pictures to enrich their vocabulary.

A book is more than just a book!

With the change in the weather, please ensure that the children are well wrapped up. We are putting Forest on hold now til after the holidays but will continue to go outside, whenever we can. If you have a choice of gloves or mittens- please send in mittens, as they are much easier for the children to put on themselves, thank you.

Sadly, we have today been informed that Mrs Nicklin has been signed off until the new year. We hope that she soon makes a full recovery and look forward to seeing her back soon.

Don't forget to put Friday 15th December at 9.15am in your diaries for Coffee and Mince Pies first before the Early Years Nativity at 10am. Thank you for all your support with our Bring In Days and hope to see lots of you on Sunday afternoon at the Christmas Bazaar!
